CAPTURES WONDERFUL OLD VIOLIN IN ABANDONED DUGOUT

Across the desert waste of no man's land when a dull in the thunder of cannon and a horrible voice of war had fallen, came a sound which made the soldiers listen in wonder as they heard a story unfolded to them and their comrades as they lived once more. They laughed and dreamed of loved ones, someone was playing a violin and from a soul of the wonderful instrument came a story of life in a dugout at Port Montreux, France, which was occupied for four years by the Germans and later taken possession of by the French.

On a stormy night during the St. Mihiel drive, Sergeant Paul Rodet, of the pigeon intelligence service, found himself in this same dugout and after making an inspection, four lighted candles on the violin which had been carefully put away in its case.

Sergeant Rodet tenderly placed the instrument in position and drew the bow across it. In a second war was forgotten, while memories of home and mother flooded the dugout and carried the boys back across the water.

This German, the real owner of the violin, must have been robbed by the Germans, for carved in deep letters are the names "Fritz Muller, Wurtzburg, Germany," and "Alfred Kienne, Nancy, France," which adds another link to the romantic life of the instrument.

This beautiful interpreter of joy and sorrow will spend its remaining days in the land of liberty. Sergeant Rodet will keep it as a sentimental companion, for it bears the names and addresses of his entire company, many

Government Authorities Predict Shortage

Forecast Higher Prices Because of Coal Scarcity Caused By Increased Demand, a Lack of Cars and Labor—Urge Early Buying

The nation faces not only a serious scarcity of coal this fall, but an actual old-fashioned famine if early buying is not started at once. This is the warning sent out by four different Government bureaus, chief of which is the Fuel Administration.

And on top of this warning comes the forecast of an inevitable higher price.

The Government bureaus which sound the warnings are the United States Fuel Administration, the United States Department of Labor, the United States Administration of Railroads and the United States Geological Survey.

"I do not wish in any sense to be an alarmist," said Dr. Harry A. Garfield, of the United States Fuel Administration, "nor am I willing to speak more in the interest of the producer of coal than of the consumer, but I feel bound to say that, as I see the situation, we are likely to experience a coal famine in the early fall unless the large users of coal begin buying.

"I warn the apartment house owners, the home dwellers and factory proprietors to buy coal now. In August, or the autumn, it will be too late. A big shortage is coming. Thousands of miners are going back to Europe. Coal production has fallen off considerably, and a shortage of many million tons looks probable. My advice to the public is to buy coal right away."
